Retail department stores:

95 percent fewer U.S. department store chains are in operation today than in the 1960s.

Airlines:

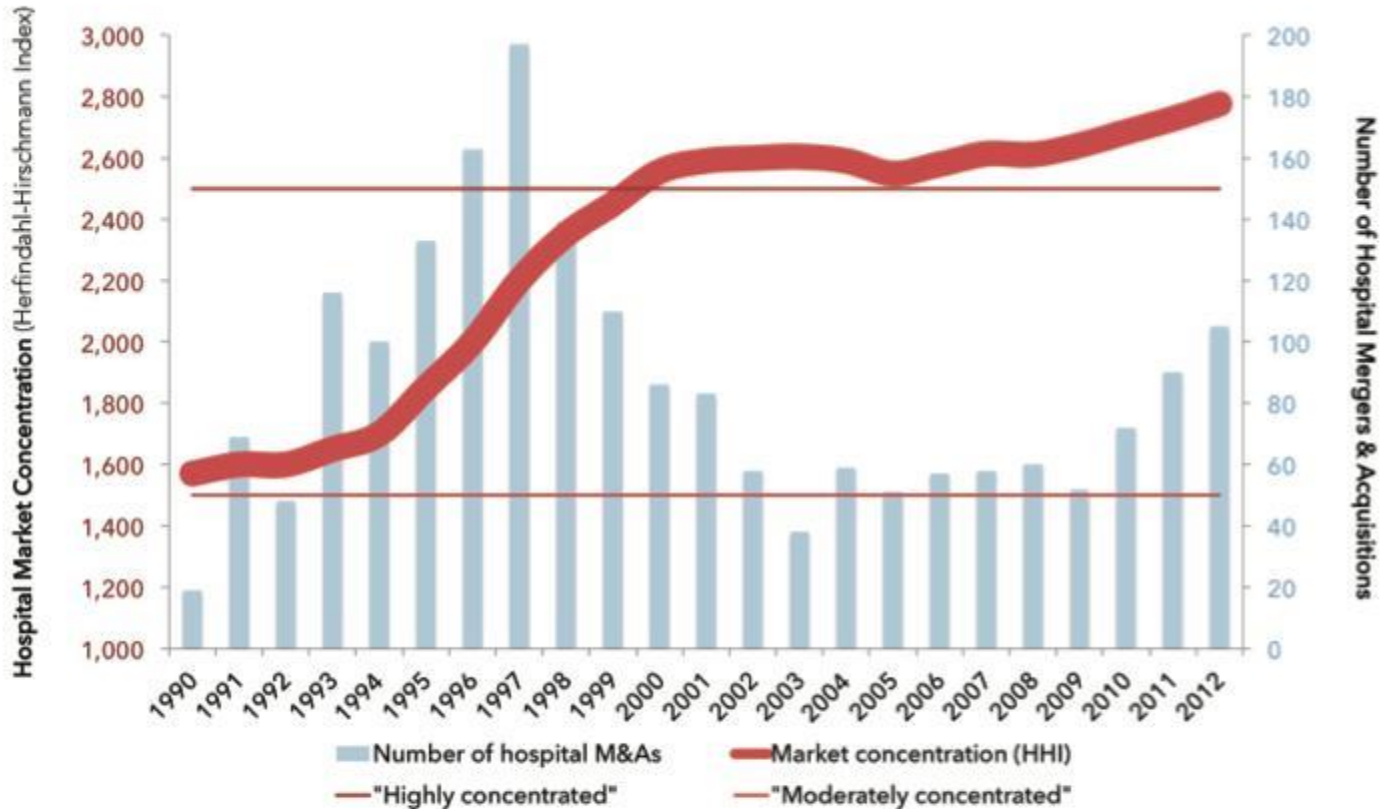

75 percent fewer U.S. passenger airlines exist today compared to the 1970s.

Banking:

52 percent fewer banks exist today in the U.S. than in 1990.

A new wave of hospital mergers is driving market concentration higher. The blue bars denote the number of hospital merger and acquisition transactions in a given year; in the 1990s, penetration of managed-care insurers, with a mandate for more aggressive cost control, led hospitals to merge in response, strengthening their market power over the insurers. The Federal Trade Commission and the U.S. Department of Justice normally consider markets with HHI above 1,500 as “moderately concentrated” and markets with HHI above 2,500 as “highly concentrated,” triggering antitrust litigation. However, consolidated hospital markets have largely avoided antitrust litigation. Today, more than half of the hospital markets in the United States have an HHI above 2,500, meaning that the DOJ and FTC would consider them to be “highly concentrated.” (Source: A. Roy analysis, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Martin Gaynor, Irving Levin Associates, HHS ASPE)
